BORNHACK

Become a sponsor of BornHack

BornHack is an anual hacker camp, which is a lot like a music festival, just with talks and workshops instead of concerts in the schedule. We value topics ranging from electronics, software, data privacy and IT security to their political and societal implications and auxillary topics. We are camping on a scouting terrain where we bring power and high speed internet straight to peoples' tents.

The average attendee works in tech, has a DIY/maker mindset, and is rooted in the free and open source community. People use BornHack as a playground for their projects, to mingle with likeminded people, discuss and have fun with technology. It is a unique place to learn and teach, where curiosity is fostered and people of all levels are encouraged to engage, ask questions and relay their own experiences. Many attendees find inspiration to develop their careers at BornHack and are open to new opportunities.

BornHack is non-profit, and to keep the admission affordable and inclusive for all we rely on sponsors and corporate ticket sales. We do not sell our participants' data in any way or form, nor do we allow any aggressive branding in our spaces. Our content is curated solely for quality and diversity, we do not have any income from selling slots in our program. We believe the overall quality to be exceptionally high and we will never compromise our integrity for income.

Our ideal sponsor is an organisation which shares some of our values and wants to help make the event better for the sake of the community. We encourage active participation from sponsors, such as using the event for teambuilding and expanding competences, recruiting or inspiration. You will find many highly skilled people across diverse fields who are willing to engage with you and your product, help you shine light on different facets and solve challenges you might be facing. We are happy to talk to you about how we can help you get the most out of your participation.
